Vol. 9. No. 3. WELLESLEY, MASS., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1909 Price 5 Cents

Be it resolved by the Shakespeare Society of Wellesley College, that we do hereby express our great sorrow in the death of Associate-Professor Sophie Jewett. She was a member of the society loved and valued for many years. She lives in our hearts for the strength and gentleness of personality which she brought to the fellowship and for the fine and generous spirit ever inciting us to happier effort. And we acknowledge with reverent gratitude her gift of creative loveliness which wrought for our enrichment.

Be it further resolved that these resolutions be published in the COLLEGE NEWS, and that a copy of the same be sent to Miss Jewett's family.

Christian Association Meeting.

Those attending the Thursday evening meeting of the Christian Association, October 22, had the pleasure of listening to a forceful and convincing, as well as an encouraging and inspiring speaker—Mr. Murray, the National Secretary of the Student Volunteers. His subject was, "The Relation of Missions to College Activity." We college people, Mr. Murray thinks, do not give enough thought to great world questions; other religions, other races, their needs and their condition. Our system of Mission classes gives us a chance to broaden our horizon in regard to these questions, and each one of us should give this study a place in our complex student life. If we challenge each of the items on our college schedule, we will find that this one is very fit to survive.

Mission study is worth while for five good reasons. First: the study of missionary literature is interesting. Anyone who has read it cannot but realize that it is as fascinating as history and romance, and that it is a class of literature that is strong, scholarly and authoritative. Then, too, mission study has a practical value for us: during our college life, because it has a bearing on our scholastic work—on sociology, economics, history and literature; in after life because it puts us in possession of facts which every man and woman should know, and prepares us, by such knowledge, for places of leadership which we will be called on to fill.

The cultural value gained from mission study is a great factor in its favor. As we are all in danger of becoming provincial, we need such a study as that of other great countries, their history, their traditions, their reforms. The great unknown is indeed a challenge to our culture.

It cannot be denied that this study is a distinct advantage to spiritual life, for we learn to reverence and understand Christ by recognizing his guiding hand in the affairs of the whole world.

But, most important of all, it helps to equip us for citizenship in the Christian world and to cast our future lives in the right direction. Before we know a great deal about the needs and conditions of non-Christian lands, we have no right to decide on the course of our lives; no right to become student volunteers; no right to decide that we will stay at home. Consideration of the vastness of the world—the sight of the great map itself—should be an inducement to us to study missions.

Mr. Murray undoubtedly accomplished his purpose in suggesting the vastness of what is unknown to the average student and in offering her an incentive to a closer and less superficial study of the far away world and its conditions.

College Settlements Association.

It is unfortunately true that the season of 1908-09 was, financially, one of the poorest ever experienced by the Wellesley Chapter of the College Settlements Association. Whereas over $500 were collected in 1907-08, the receipts for 1908-09 amounted to less than $250.

This loss is explainable in various ways. In the first place, there was a break in the administration last year, which is, of course, bad for any organization. In the second place, the college began to be taxed for the Student's Building last year, and in the third place, for some inexplicable reason, all the colleges fell below their usual standard of contribution to the Association.

None of these three causes, however, constitute the real reason for the decrease in the money given to and by the Wellesley Chapter. Last year in Wellesley there was a great deal of agitation against "activities" in college life, and it is my opinion that the Association was classed under the head of such dreaded "activities," and, as such, regarded as one thing which could be left out. The Athletic Association, the Barnswallows Association and the various departmental clubs seem a much more fundamental part of college life than does the College Settlements Association, and no doubt they are. But, if the College Settlements Association is shunned because it takes too much time in this busy college world, a great mistake is being made. I wonder how many of the members of the association know how much work is actually done, how many meetings per annum, are held, or even how the precious $1.25 apiece is spent?

The principal work of the chapter consists in giving an entertainment to the club at Denison House, on the second Thursday of each month. These entertainments last a little less than an hour and usually consist in a varied program of music, recitations, etc. Surely, out of thirteen hundred girls, eight or ten should be able to be found each month, who can do this much! There is also the doll-show, which I am happy to say, was a success last year. This is held in the old gymnasium early in December, to exhibit the dolls dressed for the Denison House Christmas celebration, and to sell candy—the proceeds of which also go to the Christmas celebration. This year there is to be a sale of articles made by the girls of the Students' Aid Committee, in connection with the Doll-show.

As far as meetings go, the chapter asks very little of its members, for there are but two held—one in the fall and one in the spring—the latter in connection with the Consumers' League. There are also three Vesper services for which the Chapter has the privilege of inviting speakers.

It is, of course, the money which is the most important part of the work of the Association. One dollar and a quarter may seem like a very big sum, but when it is taken into consideration, how much that money is needed and how far it goes, it seems as though it could be, and should be willingly spared. The quarter goes to the chapter for expenses—the dollar goes to the general treasurer in New York, who in turn gives it to the three houses in New York, Philadelphia and Boston, for their expenses. These three settlements are supported almost entirely by the Colleges—both by Alumnae and undergraduates. A dollar seems hardly too much to send to them!

Of course, it may be hard to give money and to feel that in giving one stops—not to have any further personal interest in the work of the Association. So many girls say, "But I don't want to join, unless I can work!" I cannot quite see why any girl should not realize that money without service is a great deal better than no money and no service. Cannot college girls be idealists to the extent of supporting a cause, the actual results of which they cannot see?

There is not enough work for everybody—but, unfortunately, there are not always enough people for the work—at the proper time. And those who do want to work, who can play or sing or act or recite, please do not expect the president to know this by intuition, but come to her and volunteer. And those who are not talented, but who realize the importance of the work of the Association and the responsibility of the Colleges in regard to its support, please come forward with your subscriptions and help to place Wellesley at the head of the list of supporting colleges.

EDITORIAL.

There has been a general movement lately in the American University and College to associate the student more closely with the Faculty, and to draw the student more deeply into the life of the college, even from first Freshman days. The preceptorial system at Princeton has been tried, with success as long as the preceptorial duties are principally advisory, and the student looks upon his preceptor as a guide, rather than a policeman. William R. Castle, Jr., Assistant Dean of Harvard, has an article in the Atlantic Monthly for October in which he inquires whether the college gives adequate protection to its first-year students, and what measures may be taken to broaden and intensify the scope of this protection. Mr. Castle treats the subject of protectors, and advises that most careful selections be made, as he regards them of the utmost importance. He also suggests the power lying among upper-class men, which may be employed profitably for the benefit of the first-year student. Of course, Mr. Castle's article deals exclusively with men's colleges, where social conditions are different from what they are here, and the evils from which students are to be "protected" by the closer intimacy with the Faculty are not merely academic. The main temptation by which the Wellesley Freshman, or perhaps we had better not limit ourselves to that class, is led, is the tendency to neglect work in the fascinations of college play.

Here at Wellesley, opportunities for greater freedom of intercourse between the Faculty and the Student Body are constantly increasing. Formerly, each Freshman had an adviser to help her in the selection of her courses, and to help her in any other way in which there might be a need. A new system is to be tried this year. The Freshman class chose their courses during the summer preceding their entrance, and now each member of the Faculty who acts as an adviser is to have a house or a group of girls in a house, with whom she is to become more intimately acquainted, and to whom she will give all the help she possibly can. The advisers will have meetings with the Dean, and in this way, the closer relation between Dean and student, which Mr. Castle considers of great importance, will be accomplished.

Several courses have conference appointments which tend to eliminate the disadvantages usually experienced with large classes, and to bring the student as an individual more closely to the attention of her instructor. We have too, at Wellesley, the opportunity for the "protection" of the new student, the Freshman, by upper class girls, who sometimes succeed where the Faculty fail. This year the Village Committee is larger than ever before, and includes Juniors as well as Seniors. These girls stand ready to help the new student, and are a means of drawing her more closely into the company of the college, Faculty and students alike.

Mr. Castle urges that the preceptorial system be not adopted too quickly, lest a poor preceptor counteract all good results.

While Mr. Castle's argument has little weight with us here at Wellesley, because of the difference in conditions here and at those at men's colleges, the article is of great interest to us, as pointing to one of the foremost educational movements of the day.

A very important part of the education of the more enterprising Wellesley student is to be gained in the galleries and at the concerts and operas of the city. Perhaps some of the new students do not know how very cheap that education can be. The art galleries are nearly always free or open to the public for a small fee; and the public rehearsals of the symphony concerts at Symphony Hall are open to those who are willing to "rush" for twenty-five cents; that means that one has to stand in line for about an hour and then get a very good seat in the best part of the house for hearing—the second gallery. If one goes to Mr. MacDougall's lecture on the Symphony the preceding Wednesday of every week at 4.15, one certainly does get a lot of fun and—alack the word!—improvement.

.7, P.M., vespers with special music.

Monday evening, November 1, Mr. William H. Tolman, Director of the Museum of Safety and Sanitation, will speak in College Hall Chapel, on "Transatlantic Museums of Safety and the Scope and Object of the American Movement." The lecture will be illustrated.

Tuesday, November 2, at 7.30, P.M., at the Zeta Alpha House, the first meeting of the Social Study Circle for the discussion of plans for the year.

COLLEGE NOTES.

1912 buried their Math. last Wednesday night. Requiescat in pace.

Miss Ruth Paxon spoke Sunday, October 17, on the coming convention of Student Volunteers, to be held in the Christmas vacation at Rochester. Eight students from Wellesley will be chosen for it.

Scribblers held their second meeting Friday, October 21, at the Alpha Kappa Chi House. Ethel Ambler and Beatrice Scott read.

The first normal class for teachers of Bible and Mission Study will occur October 28, at 8, P.M., in room 449 College Hall. Miss Kendrick will lead.

M. Joséph Bedir, Professor du Collège de France, the eminent Romance Scholar honored the Department of French with a visit last Monday, October 18, and expressed his high appreciation of the aims and equipment of the college under the academic direction of Miss Pendleton, Dean.

Professor Eduard Meyer, the "greatest living historian," the successor of Mommsen at the University of Berlin, and Exchange Professor in Harvard during this semester, visited the College on October sixteenth as the guest of Professor Müller of the German Department. In the afternoon an informal reception was held for Professor and Mrs. Meyer in the Tau Zeta Epsilon House, at which Mrs. Hugo Münsterberg also was present.

The Social Study Circle again proffers the use of their chief books, which may be found on their table in the newspaper reading room. Everyone is welcome to borrow, but is asked to register the loan in the book provided for the purpose.

SYMPHONY HALL: Saturday, October 30, in the afternoon, a song recital by Madame Schumann-Heink. Tickets $2.00, $1.50 and $1.00.

PAY DAY.

Students are warned of the approach of Pay Day—Tuesday, November 1. All the dues for the various college organizations are most conveniently paid then; the new students will find that the relief of having it all "over with" will go a long way toward making the empty purse tolerable, while the happiness of the various treasurers at prompt payment will be quite beyond our measure. The NEWS is also asked to say that this will be a good opportunity for you to pay your General Secretary Pledge, made last spring.

GENERAL AID SALE.

The sale for the benefit of all who wish to work for it will be held on December 4, in connection with the College Settlement's Doll Show. This leaves only a little over a month for the girls to make the articles—embroideries, jabots, Christmas-cards, calendars, all kinds of trifles suitable for gifts. A careful record will be kept of what is handed in and if it is sold the entire amount of the price will be returned to the contributor. This sale is the first of its kind to be held at Wellesley, and we hope that it will prove as successful as those of a similar character carried on in other colleges.

DEBATING CLUB.

In almost all the English and American colleges to-day there are debating clubs of various grades of activity. Our Wellesley organization is conducted on a much quieter plan than those of many of the other schools; still, although the interest in it is not so evident throughout the college as it will be in a year or two, the Wellesley Debating Club is now a thriving organization. Those who have attended the open meetings of the club know what the order of subjects has been in the last two years. With the coming winter the debates will take a step forward, dealing with questions of outside interest as well as those of our own community. Formal debating will be raised to as high a standard as we are able to lift it. In fact we hope, and expect, to be able by the winter of 1910-11 to challenge our old adversary, Vassar. You older students, in 1910 and 1911, are asked to give us your co-operation in this work, even though your Senior and Junior year schedules may seem a bit crowded. The Debating Club would give you more than it would take in time, for after the formal debate at each meeting, several informal speeches will be given. These will be but a few minutes in length but will certainly aid you much in gaining an easy manner and pleasing address. 1912, you showed last year that you have good debating material in your class and now we ask if you have not now of it? You with 1913 are fresher from your secondary schools where many of you had some training in such work. You will both, we hope, find it a good thing to keep up what you have gained there and to add more to it here. To the new students in Wellesley, the girls of the Normal School, the Debating Club extends a cordial welcome. In fact, we should like to have the hearty co-operation of all the girls in college interested in this line of work and to know who they are, now. This is all we need, now, to make sure an even chance of winning in a Vassar debate a year from this winter. All of you who feel that you would like to join us in this building up a team with a firm support as its background send your application for membership in writing to the president, Carol Scott, 30 Cazenove.

DEUTSCHER VEREIN.

The admission requirements of the Deutscher Verein are as follows:

Any member of the College above Freshman rank shall be eligible for membership who has had, or is having, in the German Department of the College courses above eleven and twenty-two (XI and XXII), and at least two-thirds of whose work in the department has been "credit grade." Seniors taking courses eleven and twenty-two (XI and XXII) may, on application to the Secretary of the Verein, be elected by special vote of the Board of Directors.

Anyone who thinks she is eligible and who does not receive a notice of the first meeting, November 8, please notify Mary E. Warren, 80 Shafer, Secretary of the Deutscher Verein.

Wellesley College Artist Recitals, 1909-1910.

Attention is called to the programme for this year. Through these recitals we have the unique opportunity of hearing world-famous performers without the trouble and expense of a trip to Boston. Mme. Carrens is the greatest living woman pianist; she has played in every large city in Europe and America. The Flouzaley Quartette has, in successfully rivaling the Kneisel Quartette, achieved the apparently impossible. Mme. Kirkley-Lunn comes to us with a large operatic and concert experience.

England's Famous Leader for the Cause of Equal Suffrage Speaks in Boston.

Mrs. Pankhurst's lecture in Tremont Temple, Friday, October 22, was the first address she has given in America. It was with great expectancy therefore that this audience awaited her. Her first words turned all opposition into sympathy. Quietly, with well modulated voice, with excelling skill in the use of the gesture, her beautiful face aglow with enthusiasm, she set forth in clear logical sequence the situation which confronted them in England and explained their solution of the problem, which has resulted in the militant tactics. She explained how for fifty years the suffragists of Great Britain have been working for the vote, using all peaceful methods imaginable. They have tried persuasion and long petitions. Finally they were forced to acknowledge the hopelessness of these methods by the words of one of the statesmen to whom they appealed. "I have always been in favor of woman suffrage," he assented. "Certainly everyone will agree that every tax payer should have the right to vote, but no responsible statesman will ever deal with this question until you bring it to the forefront of practical politics."

So here was their problem; to force the question to the front, to bring it before the people. To do this they held meeting after meeting, but the public did not heed them. The newspapers would not report their efforts, and they were forced to use more extreme methods to make the question a political issue. Moreover, both the social and political situations showed that the time was ripe for the solution of the problem. There has been a gradual change in the duties and position of the women of the country. The growth of the industrial system took the women and their work from the home into the factory. So that in England to-day there are five million women earning wages. These women must abide by the laws, some of which are so shamefully unjust that the thinking women of the country realize that, as long as there is the slightest hope of changing them, "patience is a crime." For instance, by English law not a single married woman has any legal existence, has any guardianship over her children. The divorce laws are another case of unequal sex legislation. All the women demand is that they shall have equal laws with the men. The women's prisons are crowded, owing to women being unable to earn a living. Mrs. Pankhurst said, "they would not be living these lives of shame if we were able to get just laws passed for them. These are the reasons why we believe that if the vote will give them protection, it is our duty to get the vote for them."

As to the political situation, the government is now engaged in social legislation. There are bills before Paliament, which regulate the rearing of a child. The absurdity of men deciding these things is apparent. These are women's affairs and they should be consulted. "We don't want to fix your laws," said Mrs. Pankhurst, addressing the men. "But we want to have a say as to who shall decide our laws for us. We are willing to let you legislate for us but you must be responsible to us."

Apparently the time was ripe for action, something had to be done to reach the indifference of the women and the hearts and consciences of the men who had the power. The suffragist's method was to attempt to bring the issue before the campaigning parties then in the field. This they did by attending public meetings and asking the men questions. The women were put out of the meeting, and often imprisoned, but they won their point, for the rewsapers recorded the fact that "some women wanted the vote." Being refused admittance themselves they still persisted, and sent in messages bearing the words, "Rebellion to tyrants is obedience to God." "Sad to relate," added Mrs. Pankhurst, "these arguments have weighed more with the government than all reasonings. 'Practical politics' have availed. It has become a Civil War, the women are fighting with the weapons that men used before they had the weapon of the vote. But in all this war no human being has suffered any injury except the women. We have gone no further than the government has forced us. We know that there are thousands of women leading lives of shame, which they would not do if they had the vote. We believe that it is our duty to bring our influence to bear to secure them this vote. We want to remain women; we want to attend to our own business. In a home conditions are not happy unless you have a man and a woman at the head, each performing his own part. It is so with the state. You have had only man with the man's point of view and degradation has resulted. We are playing the woman's part to come to the rescue. I do not disparage men, they have accomplished wonders, but we have our duty to the race as well as they. We are all human beings together, together we must work out our salvation. They have done their best and failed; we want to help them in these things which we understand because we are women; to combine our intelligence with theirs in order to make this world better than they alone could make it."
